

The Whooping Crane's A(MAZE)ing Migration

It's fall in Wisconsin and the air is feeling cold. Whooping Cranes are getting ready to make their migration south. Migration is the movement of animals from one location to another, and for many animals it is necessary for their survival. Whooping Cranes migrate in the spring and fall in search for better weather and more food. Can you help the Whooping Crane migrate from Wisconsin to Alabama for the winter?

Whooping Crane
Grus americana

● Wisconsin

